ADULT SERVICES

ART HACKS

Librarian Raina Konazeski was invited to the 2019 ILF conference, to present a 15 minute Art Hacks presentation as part of a focus on special library programming. In preparation for the ILF conference, Raina presented two sessions as VCPL Staff Association programs. All sessions were well attended. Staff enjoyed having the opportunity to participate in an Art Hacks project and learn about how contemporary art can be used to level the playing field for all artistic levels. Many attending the ILF presentation took copious notes and posed questions with an interest in developing their own similar programs.

For the Art Hacks November program at VCPL, the art style studied was a variation of splatter painting with manipulated watercolor on canvas. The featured artist was Lee Krasner, a leader for woman in Abstract art.

COMMUNITY ENGAGEMENT

On November 20, Heather Rayl and Luke Gentry participated in a Poverty Simulation for Indiana State University Occupational Therapy students. In this simulation, Heather, Luke, and the other volunteers played the roles of community resources, such as homeless shelters, banks, employers, schools, and various social and government services, as well as those who might profit off of those in poverty, such as payday loan businesses and pawn shops. The students were given roles to take on – for example a single father, taking care of three children, or a set of grandparents responsible for a sick child – and had to make do with the resources available to them. The students used this experience to gain a measure of insight into the lives of the people they will be serving in the future.

SYCAMORE SAM READERS

On November 20, the Sycamore Readers finished the semester of coaching elementary grade readers. The service will resume on Feb 3. Application forms are available on the VCPL website at www.vigo.lib.in.us/lc/reading-coaches.

WATCH THIS! MOVIE ON LEADERSHIP

The movie, “A Private War,” shown on November 13, brought one customer to tears over how inspiring it was and how realistically it was filmed, with actual footage from wars. She said it was heartbreakingly real and gave her goose bumps. The film was based on the true story of a woman leader in the world of journalism, Marie Colvin, who went to the most dangerous war zones to bring back the human stories and their trauma to remind people of the tolls of war. There was a great conversation after the movie about how Colvin was a true leader.

decorating contest, and Jeff Crews and Sarah Trover created an entry for VCPL. This display won the “Best Holiday Spirit” award for spotlighting the importance of giving this holiday season. The tree is full of toiletry items, such as combs, soap, toothbrushes, deodorant and more, that will be distributed to the homeless in our community.

VCPL participated in a tree decorating contest open to local non-profits as part of Miracle on 7th Street. Library staff created a tree entitled, “Baby, It’s Cold Outside” that featured baby bottles, bibs, pacifiers, receiving blankets, etc. After the event, the items were given to Bethany House for mothers in need.

Miracle on 7th Street also had a window

ED HOWARD EXHIBITION

On November 1, the Special Collections department unveiled their new exhibition on the life of Ed Howard, who was the director of Vigo County Public Library from 1968 to 1979. from the Emeline Fairbanks Memorial Library to the current building at Seventh and Poplar streets. To better illustrate this moment in VCPL history, SPC featured the original architectural model of the VCPL building in the Howard exhibition. SPC is pleased to honor Ed Howard's legacy as a leader and a military veteran through the months of November and December with this exhibition.

TECH TEAM

GENERATING CHANGE, TRANSFORMING LIVES IN ACTION

At an iPad outreach program at Brownstone, one of their volunteers happened to be in the area where VCPL was providing iPad instruction. The volunteer commented that she recognized Ashley Wadsworth and had come to a resume class at the Main Library. After making some changes to her resume, she had attended a meeting downstairs with a job agency and was hired! After that, she told a few others about how to do their resumes in Word, based on the class she had attended.

TED TALKS ON LEADERSHIP

On the evening of November 25, local residents watched and discussed curated TED Talks in Haute Create. The talks focused on Women in Leadership, Creativity in Leadership, Successful Leadership Skills, and Leadership in the Workplace. Several Tech Team members were given credit for selecting the talks prior to the public viewing. At the conclusion of the evening, attendees discussed what they had learned.

WEST BRANCH

SOAPWORKS

One of the West Branch's popular programs, Soapworks, was led by Librarian Sharon McConnell. People of all ages gathered to make soap and fold decorative cardstock into gift boxes for their finished products. The participants mixed the soap base, colors, scents, and special additives that were available, including cocoa butter, orange peel, eucalyptus, and vitamin E oil. Once attendees created the soap mixture they wanted, they poured the soap into molds to set while they made their boxes.

TERRE HAUTE ROCKS

West Branch Librarian Sharon McConnell and Youth Services Assistant Librarian Kateri Tuttle, who is one of the creators of the Terre Haute Rocks Facebook group, teamed up to present a holiday edition of the popular rock painting program. Participants used acrylic paint to decorate rocks which they can either keep for themselves or hide somewhere in the community for others to find and enjoy.

MAKER HOUR

In November, the West Branch held a weekly Maker Hour where youth were shown how to create using simple machines and technology. The first week, Ashley Wadsworth from the Tech Team brought the Osmo® iPad app for the participants to create physical drawings from digital images and vice versa. For week two, Sharon McConnell taught the participants about Rube Goldberg machines, often complicated devices that are set up to perform simple tasks, like the board game Mousetrap. The final Maker Hour was designed to let the youth create machines that move using rubber band power. All three organized projects had specific instructions and guidelines, but they also all allowed participants to be creative and use their imaginations and trial-and-error to complete the tasks.

YOUTH SERVICES

DIVE INTO ROLE PLAYING GAMES

The first meeting of the Dive into RPGs (Role Playing Games) program on December 3 welcomed 6 teens to a collaborative storytelling game in which the players take on a fictional character to experience and interact with an imaginary, fantasy world. These games create a perfect playground for encouraging five core competencies of social and emotional learning: self-awareness, self-management, social awareness, relationship skills, and responsible decision-making. Each teen was encouraged to choose their character's name, gender, and physical characteristics, which allows players to experiment with various aspects of their identity without real-world risk or repercussions. When a player referred to another player's character with the wrong pronouns, the others were quick to correct them on their pronoun usage. They also monitored each other's general behavior and language, ensuring that everyone was treated respectfully. RPGs let the players take an active role in an epic fantasy adventure. One teen stated, "this is more fun than video games."

Wiggle Worms Storytime is presented by Neal Steichen, the newest Assistant Librarian in the Youth Services Department. After his first storytime, a grandmother called Youth Services with these kind words: "We thought that Neal did such a great job during his Wiggle Worms story, especially since it was his first storytime! We were really happy to have him doing it because we always love storytime when we come, but having a guy do it was special for my grandson, and he really enjoyed seeing a positive male role model doing storytime."
